My name is Danielle McKain, and I am the mother of a child with a congenital heart defect from the Pittsburgh, PA area. On September 27, 2010, my son Jameson was born with hypo plastic left heart syndrome. After four open heart surgeries, my husband and I, with the help of Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh UPMC (CHP), had to place Jameson on the heart transplant list. Luckily, just before his 1st birthday, he received a new heart and a new chance at life. After 6 open heart surgeries and plenty of time spent at CHP Jameson is at home recovering and thriving!

Because of the strong support our family received from friends, neighbors, community members, even strangers, I, along with a group of individuals touched by Jameson's story, created the Jameson's Army non-profit organization. Our mission is "Raising awareness and funding for children and families affected by congenital heart defect (CHD) and those who help support them." We want to help spread awareness and education concerning CHD and help these children to grow and live the lives they deserve.

Along with spreading awareness we contribute a food and needs drop once a month to the children and families staying at the heart center of CHP, The Children's Home of Pittsburgh as well as provide therapeutic heart cough pillows used for the recovery process of open-heart surgery. We also dedicate our resources to local community organizations.

We ask that you take a look at our website www.jamesonsarmy.org.
